Psychosocial support

MAISON
ALOÏS

The psychosocial support team assists both the caregiver and the adult living with dementia by providing information about the disease and the various resources available to them.

The team is attentive to the evolving needs of the family and offers personalized support via phone, virtually, or at Maison Aloïs.

The support helps reduce mental load and improve quality of life. It provides key tools for managing the situation with greater peace of mind.

Additionally, support groups, activities, and events are organized, creating a safe, non-judgmental space for discussion.

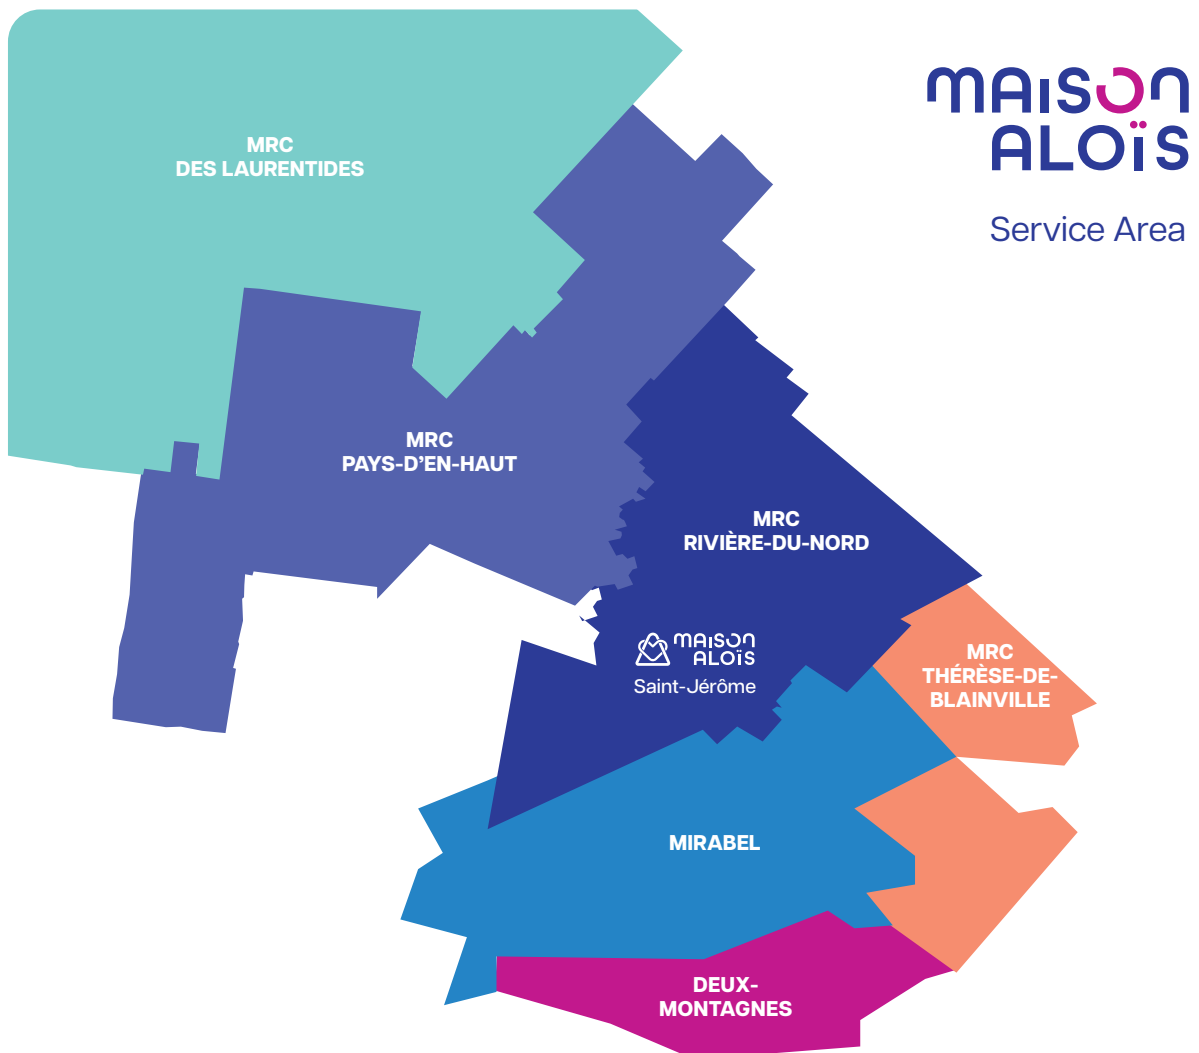

Respite

Respite is a break designed to prevent and reduce caregiver burnout by temporarily easing the responsibilities associated with their role.

Through stimulating activities, respite is available to any caregiver who supports, is involved with, or provides care to an adult living with dementia.

At Maison Aloïs, respite takes the form of personalized and tailored support and stimulation. It is also offered at home or even through virtual activities, during recovery periods or while traveling.

Our mission is to support adults living with dementia and their caregivers, by creating conditions conducive to improving their quality of life, throughout their journey.
